Migration Update: U.S. Postal Service Mandate

Pitney Bowes is committed to keeping our customers informed of changes that can affect your Pitney Bowes postage meter equipment. Like many businesses, you may not be aware of the mandate by the United States Postal Service ("Postal Service") requiring that all postage metering equipment use digital printing technology.

The Postal Service has launched a four-phased Meter Technology Plan to remove all letterpress postage meters from service and replace them with digital postage meters. To date, the Postal Service migration for Phase I (mechanical) and Phase II (manually reset) meters has been completed.

Phase III of the migration plan is currently underway and pertains to your Pitney Bowes postage meter(s) listed above. According to the mandate, as of December 31, 2006, these Pitney Bowes postage meter(s) will have to be replaced with a model that uses digital printing technology.

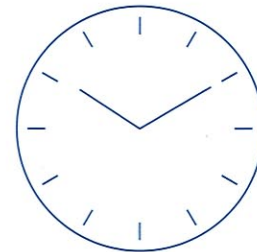

Enclosed is a letter from Wayne A. Wilkerson, Manager, Postage Technology Management at the Postal Service, providing further information about this mandate.
